Rusty Morgan is a distinguished figure in the Texas livestock industry, co-owning a burgeoning Wagyu cattle business. Despite being a relatively new venture, Rusty's expertise in embryo transfers, breeding, and managing the reproductive health of recipient cows has quickly positioned the company as a notable player in the Wagyu industry. His commitment to producing superior Wagyu cattle has already garnered significant recognition.

In addition to his contributions to the Wagyu sector, Rusty owns Morgan Livestock Equipment, a highly successful company providing equipment to livestock operations. His dual roles in both breeding and equipment have solidified his standing as a key figure in the livestock industry.

With over 30 years of experience, Rusty has earned an outstanding reputation, widely recognized across Texas and the southwest U.S. His leadership and commitment to excellence are evident in his role on the board of directors for the Texas Wagyu Association, where he currently serves as Vice President, guiding the association toward new heights in the industry.

Rusty has been married for 34 years and is a proud father of five and grandfather of four. His dedication to his family and his industry is evident in every aspect of his work and life.
